DODGERS BOARD OF STRATEGY

...BATTING 1.000

THE FIVE-MAN Board of Strategy of the Los Angeles Dodgers is batting 1.000. Created for the season of 1965, the dugout braintrust of Manager Walt Alston and coaches Jim Gilliam, Preston Gomez, Lefty Phillips and Danny Ozark has led the club to two pennants in two seasons, winning on the next-to-last day in a 1965 nail-biter and going right down to the final out in 1966.

For Alston last year's triumph was his sixth in thirteen seasons with the Dodgers. Despite the debacle last October when the Baltimore Orioles swept over the Dodgers four in a row, Alston has been the most successful National League pilot in World Series history. He scored the team's first October Classic triumph in 1955 after other Dodger managers had failed in 1916, 1920, 1941, 1947, 1949, 1952 and 1953. Beaten by the Yankees in 1956, Alston then went on to win again in 1959 (over the Chicago White Sox), 1963 (a 4-game sweep of the Yankees) and 1965 (over the Minnesota Twins).

Born December 1, 1911, Alston, a one-time school teacher in his native Ohio, began his professional career with the St. Louis Cardinals, had a brief major league trial in 1936 (don't ask him what happened in his only time at bat!), became a playing manager in 1940, joined the Dodger organization in the same capacity four years later and moved up through the organization in Trenton, Nashua (where he met Buzzie Bavasi), Pueblo, St. Paul and Montreal.

He became manager of Brooklyn in 1954 and, in his thirteen years as their boss, the Dodgers have finished first six times, second three times and in the second division only twice. In 1962 the Dodgers were beaten in the final game of a 3-game play-off. Add to all of this the fact that Alston has been the winning manager in five of seven All-Star Games in which he has bossed the N.L.'s best.

Gilliam (Born: Nov. 17, 1928) has spent all but one of his professional seasons with Alston. He joined him in Montreal and helped his club win pennants in 1951 and 1952. He came to the Dodgers in '53 and, as Rookie of the Year, was vital in the winning of the N.L. flag. The following season Alston was named manager of the Dodgers and together they have enjoyed six pennant-winning pursuits.

Preston Gomez, christened Pedro April 20, 1924 in Central Preston, Oriente, Cuba, played the infield briefly for the Washington Senators and managed in the Mexican, International and Pacific Coast Leagues. One of his most notable triumphs occured in 1959 when his Havana team, finishing third in the International, won the play-offs and beat Minneapolis in the Junior World Series. The following year his Spokane Indians finished on top for the Dodger organization. After three years at Spokane, Gomez had a two-year stint with the Yankee farm system at Richmond, but returned to the Dodgers in 1965 as a member of Alston's staff.

Born November 26, 1919, in Buffalo, Daniel Leonard Ozark, like Skipper Walt, spent most of his career as a minor league slugger. He had just started his baseball career when the Army beckoned and his three military "seasons" included the Battle of the Bulge, from which he still retains a memento or two — shell fragments in one of his knees. Danny hit thirty-one homers and drove in 142 runs in his first year back in baseball action (at Abilene, Tex.). After playing for Ft. Worth, St. Paul, Newport News and Elmira, Ozark took on his first managerial chores with Wichita Falls in 1956 and moved up the Dodger ladder at Macon, St. Paul, Omaha and Spokane enroute to his current duties.

Lefty Phillips, a native of Los Angeles (May 16, 1919), has been on the West Coast scene ever since he broke into baseball at Bisbee, Arizona, in 1939. Arm trouble thwarted him as a pitcher but he remained in the game as a scout for the Reds and Dodgers. After a year on special assignments out of General Manager Bavasi's office, Phillips was put in charge of the Dodger pitchers in the coaching shake-up which preceded the '65 campaign.

PITCHERS

JIM BREWER . . . Late in 1965, Jim Brewer underwent surgery on the elbow of his pitching arm, having some bone chips removed and a cyst cleaned up by Dr. Bob Kerlan. This put a bit of a damper on Jim's Spring Training maneuvers and it wasn't until May 20 that he was called upon to pitch in a ball game. There had been talk of Jim joining the starting ranks in '66 because, in '65, he had compiled a 1.84 earned run average over nineteen ball games. Late that year he had hurled his first complete game in the majors — a 4-hit shutout victory over the Houston Astros. All of this was accomplished despite the fact his sore elbow bothered him from time to time all year. Jim, who'll celebrate his thirtieth birthday after the 1967 season, came to the Dodgers from the Cubs for another southpaw, Dick Scott. Assigned to a minor league club in '64, Jim impressed Walt Alston at Dodgertown and he stayed with the big club, enjoying two World Series paychecks.

BRUCE BRUBAKER . . . Seldom do the Dodgers go into the draft meeting planning to make a selection. But last winter was an exception. They wanted — and got — Bruce Ellsworth Brubaker, Jr., right-handed pitcher of the San Diego Padres. This was the second time in his career Brubaker was drafted, the Phillies plucking him in '65 but sending him to San Diego after a Spring trial. Actually, the Dodgers will be his fourth organization. He was signed by John Ogden, for the Milwaukee Braves, in 1959 and became the property of the Detroit Tigers at Syracuse in 1964. In 1962 he led the Northwest League in strikeouts (209) and fanned 14-or-more batters in five games. His 1964 E.R.A. 2.63 at Syracuse was tops for the International League. He also led in victories (15) and was second in shutouts (4). The league managers voted his curve the best in the league that year and rated him behind only Mel Stottlemyre as a major league pitching prospect. He was named on the Triple-A East All-Star team.

DICK CALMUS . . . The first-year player rule, as it was constituted in the early '60s, insisted that Dick Calmus remain with the Dodgers for the entire season of 1963. Wasn't a bad break for the youngster, either, because that was the year the Dodgers not only won the pennant but enjoyed a four-game World Series sweep over the New York Yankees. Like several other pitchers on the Dodger staff, Calmus was a mere onlooker during that World Series but he had contributed three vital victories along the way to the National League pennant. He defeated the San Francisco Giants twice in relief and also pitched five fine innings enroute to another win over the Mets. And, strangely, he had the best E.R.A. average (2.66) of his career in his only season in the majors. He had broken in with an 8-and-4 record and a 4.60 E.R.A., with the Midwest Dodgers of 1962 and his earned run figures since his lone Dodger year have been 4.23, 4.53 and last season's 3.45. Signed out of Webster (Tulsa) High, Dick had won Prep All-American honors as a basketball player as well as All-City and All-Oklahoma citations in baseball.

DON DRYSDALE . . . Big Don Drysdale, in his 11-year career with the Dodgers, has hurled more innings than any man in the history of the club. He slipped by Dazzy Vance last August and goes into 1967 with a total of 2,848 innings. For the fifth straight season Don started 40-or-more games. He failed to lead the league in this workhorse department for the first time in five years, falling one start short of a 3-way tie with Sandy Koufax and Jim Bunning. Don worked 274 innings in '66 and this was the first time in Dodger Stadium history he had not thrown three hundred rounds. At that, only four pitchers in the N.L. topped him — Koufax at 323, Bunning at 314, Juan Marichal at 307 and Bob Gibson at 280. His 13-16 won-and-lost record represented the first time he fell below the .500 mark since his 12-13 season in 1958. Don got off to a poor start and his record at one time was a lop-sided 4-10. Over the last three weeks of the season, however, he was the Drysdale of old — and his resurgence couldn't have been more timely. On Sept. 10 he hurled 8⅓ innings of an eventual 10-inning, 1-to-0 triumph over Houston. The next day the Dodgers went into first place, never to be ousted. On Sept. 15, Drysdale hurled 8⅔ innings and beat Pittsburgh, 5 to 3. Three successive complete-game victories followed — 6 to 1 over the Phillies and shutouts of the Cubs, 4 to 0, and Cards, 2 to 0. On the final day of the season Don tried to make it five in a row. Had he done so the pennant would have been clinched in the first half of a double-header in Philadelphia. But Don failed and it was up to Sandy Koufax to win it all in the nightcap.

JOHN DUFFIE . . . Los Angeles Lakers' Coach Fred Schaus, who is a great Dodger fan, may soon have a new hero among them — right-handed pitcher John Duffie, of the Decatur, Georgia, Duffies. John is built along lines with which Schaus has become familiar. He's 6 feet, 7 inches tall and tops 200 on the scales. Signed by Scout Leon Hamilton, Duffie had one of the most impressive records in the Dodger farm system in his first professional season. Pitching for Jamestown, of the N.Y.-Pa. League, he started 24 games, hurled 14 complete games, fanned 129 batters in 164 innings and had an E.R.A. of 3.13 while winning 13 and losing 8. He then was one of the best pitchers the Dodgers had in the Winter Instructional League in Arizona, winning four games with a 2.76 E.R.A. Brimming with confidence, Duffie didn't bother to move back to Georgia after the baseball season but settled in Inglewood. Asked one day last Winter in the Dodger office where he thought he could pitch in 1967, Duffie didn't hesitate a moment in cracking: "Right here, of course." At Brewton-Parker Junior College in 1965, Duffie had an 8-and-1 record and struck out 109 batters in seventy-six innings — and, what's more, walked only eighteen. These big fellows usually have control problems but not so Duffie. At Jamestown, too, he walked only 48 — an average of fewer than three for each nine innings of pitching.

LEON EVERITT . . . When Don Sutton was scratched from the Dodgers' trip to Japan last Fall, his place on the squad was taken by Leon Edward Everitt, who had bewildered N.Y.-Pa. League batters with a great curve ball in his first full year of pro ball. He fanned 141 batters in 141 innings and compiled an 11-4 record and a 2.36 earned run average. Everitt pitched impressively in Hawaii but didn't get many opportunities against the Tokyo Giants and other Japanese teams. In Marshall, Texas, Everitt hurled for Pemberton High and scored sixteen victories, without a defeat, as he led his team to the state championship. He averaged sixteen strikeouts a game that year and won All-State honors. He won six (again without a loss) in 1965 and was then signed by Hugh Alexander to a Dodger contract, pitching for Tom Lasorda's Pocatello club the rest of the season.

ALAN FOSTER . . . One of the most promising youngsters on the Dodgers' 1967 roster is Alan Foster, a high-bonus pick from Hacienda Heights who has a 5-2 record at Santa Barbara and an 11-5 record at Albuquerque in a year and a half of professional baseball — but did more to help his chances with the Dodgers in a five-week tour of Hawaii and Japan. Walt Alston, using Foster often, was impressed with what he saw. In Japan he was easily the most effective Dodger pitcher, winning three of the nine games taken by the Dodgers, compiling a 2.53 earned run average and fanning 27 batters in 32 innings. Foster joined the Dodgers late in 1966 but didn't get to pitch in a stretch game so Alston eagerly awaited the Oriental tour to test him. "I had to like what I saw of this kid," was the Skipper's summary on Foster. Foster is a graduate of Los Altos High where he lettered in baseball, basketball and football. In his senior year he struck out 188 batters in 99 innings and had an amazing E.R.A. of 0.39. Son of a doctor, Alan was headed for a career in architecture until intercepted by Dodger scout Ben Wade. Dodgers changed another embryo architect a few years back — guy by the name of Sandy Koufax.

MIKE KEKICH . . . Sidelined by injury during most of the 1966 season, Mike Kekich moves into the third year of his professional career trying to make a comeback. When right, he has an excellent fast ball and sharp breaking stuff. A resident of Bellflower, Mike pitched in only eleven games last year at Albuquerque and Santa Barbara and worked only twenty-seven innings for a combined 0-and-1 record. He had been moved all the way from St. Petersburg to Santa Barbara to Spokane to the Dodgers in 1964 and, under the first-year player rule, stayed with the Dodgers throughout their '65 campaign, being a joyful spectator during the club's World Series triumph over the Twins. Mike got one start that year — against the Phillies — and fanned Tony Taylor, the first major leaguer he ever faced. Matter of fact he also fanned four others during his 3⅓-inning stint. Wildness and a home run caught up with him, however, and he suffered a defeat. As in 1966 this was his only decision of the year.

BILL LARKIN . . . The only 20-game winner on the Dodgers' 1967 Spring roster — Bill Larkin. He won that many for Albuquerque. After getting off to a fantastic 10-and-1 start he battled an arm problem for a spell and then came on to reach the 20-victory circle in August. Crediting Bob Kennedy, his Albuquerque manager, and Red Adams, Dodgers' pitching trouble-shooter, with having effectively changed his style of delivery last Spring, Larkin led the Texas League in complete games (12), innings pitched (197) and victories (20). He lost only eight. This was his fourth year in the Dodger system after he had been drafted by them from Baltimore's farms in the first-year player draft of 1962. He's a resident of Riverside and at Rubidoux High played basketball, baseball and football. Larkin was the first pitcher to win twenty games in the Texas League in nine seasons. He hurled five shutouts.

BOB LEE . . . Several hours before the deadline for interleague trading without waivers last Winter, Buzzie Bavasi and Fred Haney concluded a pitching swap which sent southpaw Nick Willhite to the Angels and brought Bob Lee, powerful right-handed relief specialist, to the Dodgers. With Phil (The Vulture) Regan, Bob Miller and Ron Perranoski already on the Dodger relief staff, Bavasi obviously wasn't adding Bob without something else in mind. His plan was to switch Miller to the ranks of starters to take up some of the slack left by the departure of Sandy Koufax and to move Lee into Miller's spot as a Dodger fireman. A Bellflower high school and American Legion star before he went into pro baseball in 1956, Lee enjoyed three fine seasons with the Angels, compiling earned run averages of 1.51, 1.92 and 2.74. He appeared in a total of 194 games for a composite 20-and-16 record. In 1965 he set three Angel club records—69 games, 21 saves and 50 game-finishes. In 1964 his 64 games was an American League mark for most appearances by a rookie pitcher. The year before at Batavia, N.Y., Lee had a 20-and-2 record and won his last eighteen decisions. The year before that he was in Spring training with the Pirates and fanned sixteen Indians in an exhibition game.

BOB MILLER . . . When the Dodgers obtained Bob Lee from the Angels, Bob Miller was automatically returned to the ranks of starters although he had opened only three games in three years. Bob was both a starter and reliever in 1963 when the Dodgers acquired him from the Mets and had a combined 2.61 earned run average that year and a 10-and-8 record. As a starter he was 6 and 5 and as a reliever 4 and 3. He hurled only two complete games. But Miller last Winter remarked that victories, not complete games, were more important to him. "I plan to go at top speed as far as I can and let the bullpen take over in the late innings. I KNOW what kind of pitching we've got out there." Miller came to the Dodgers in a deal which sent Larry Burright and Tim Harkness to the Mets. As a Dodger his four-year earned run average is an excellent 2.72 and he has never been over an E.R.A. of three runs per game since coming to the West Coast. A native of St. Louis, Bob was originally the property of the Cards and went to the Mets in expansion maneuvers. Last Winter Bob purchased a horse-breeding establishment in Seaside, Oregon, where he had a stable of eighty horses to handle. After that sort of exercise, pitching figured to be easy.

JOE MOELLER . . . Skipper Walt Alston rated Joe Moeller's 1966 job "one of the toughest on our ball club." He pointed out that it's not at all easy to be effective as a pitcher on the sort of program he had to set up for the tall right-hander. Joe seldom knew when he would pitch, was called on for both long and short relief assignments and was occasionally given a start. Despite this uneven pattern of work, Moeller, in 29 games and 79 innings, had a 2.51 earned run average which was bettered among the 1966 Dodgers only by Sandy Koufax and Phil Regan. Moeller's career has been studded by injuries and they have come at crucial times. He seemed headed for a starting role last Spring, however, when he, Don Sutton and Nick Willhite were the outstanding performers in Florida during the long holdout by Koufax and Don Drysdale. When the aces reported for action, Sutton was given the No. 4 starting role behind Sandy, Don, and Claude Osteen. Willhite was sent down to Spokane and re-acquired. Moeller took over the miscellaneous-assignment chores and did right well. Perhaps 1967 will be the year he earns regular rotation. At twenty-four Joe moves into his sixth professional campaign.

CLAUDE OSTEEN . . . One of the most consistent performers in the National League, a pitcher who rarely has a "bad" outing, Claude Osteen scored seventeen victories, his career high — majors and minors — last season. He finished the campaign in a somewhat fatigued state and this ruined his bid for twenty victories. He lost three of his last four decisions as he went into the mid-September stretch with a 16-11 record. Nevertheless, it is notable that Osteen was the starting pitcher in twenty-three victories. In the fourteen games he lost, the Dodgers scored a total of only SIXTEEN runs. They were shut out six times with Claude on the mound. When Don Drysdale and Sandy Koufax continued salary negotiations into late March, Osteen was billed as the No. 1 man on the staff and given the Opening Night assignment against the Astros. He won, 3 to 2, hurled three straight complete-game victories (3-2, 4-2, 3-2) and then, bidding for his fourth in a row, once again gave up two runs but had the misfortune of running afoul of the first of Larry Jaster's five shutouts over the Dodgers. The young Card southpaw bested him, 2 to 0. Osteen and John Kennedy came from the Senators in a deal which sent five Dodgers to Washington. His thirty-two victories over a two-season stretch have been mighty vital in a pair of successful pennant pursuits carried down to Saturday of the last week in 1965 and to the final out in 1966.

RON PERRANOSKI . . . Going into the 1966 campaign, Ron Perranoski's lifetime earned run average of 2.48 was the best in baseball among current campaigners who had hurled at least five hundred innings. As late as August 7, Ron seemed on his way to improving even those parsimonious figures. His earned run average at that date was 1.80. Then, unaccountably, rival batters began to bomb him. Over his last seventeen games and 27 innings, Ron gave up 18 runs for a stretch E.R.A. of 6.00. His season mark zoomed to 3.18, highest since his arrival on the hectic Dodger scene. His showing was a complete reversal from his 1965 performance when he got off to a slow start and then was almost untouchable in the stretch run. From August 7 (see date above) of 1965 through season's end, Ron was in 21 games, pitched 47⅔ innings, allowed 24 hits, three runs (two earned) and posted a fantastic 0.38 E.R.A. The Dodgers scampered through a 13-game winning streak which all but wrapped up that '65 flag and "Perry" was in six of them, working 20⅔ innings without allowing an earned run. One of these was a terrific six-inning stint against the Braves after an early Koufax kayo and the victory the Dodgers finally scored in the 11th, 7 to 6, that night was considered the turning point of the season.

MIKE PRICE . . . Pitching Coach Lefty Phillips, who piloted the Dodger club in the Arizona Instructional League, was impressed by the performance of Mike Price, a graduate of Montclair High who had also starred for Upland College. Price still rates as one of his biggest baseball thrills the fact that he pitched Upland to its first victory over Azusa in fifteen years. In that game, Mike fanned twenty-two batters. In '64 he helped the Upland American Legion team win the national championship. He won four and lost one in the title tournament, allowing a total of only seventeen hits in his five games, fanning twelve or more in each game. He struck out sixteen in the only game he lost. In two seasons of organized play, interrupted by a military service stint, Price has hurled only 118 innings but has struck out 159 batters. And he has walked only fifty-eight. He goes to his first major league camp at the age of twenty.

PHIL REGAN . . . Just prior to the midnight deadline for interleague trading December 15, 1965, Buzzie Bavasi swung a deal with the Detroit Tigers which, as later events proved, won a pennant for the Dodgers. He gave up utility infielder Dick Tracewski for Phil Regan, a right-handed pitcher whom the Tigers had left in Syracuse most of the '65 season. The player swap didn't shake the baseball world but Regan's pitching certainly stirred things up in the National League. Appearing in sixty-five games as a relief pitcher he compiled a great 1.62 earned run average, won fourteen games, lost only one and had a 13-game winning streak at the end of the season. He was voted the Comeback Player of the Year and was a last-minute selection (by his proud manager) for the National League All-Star team. He was credited with seventeen saves and actually took part in a total of thirty-nine Dodger victories. When he came to the Dodgers he hoped to join the club's starting corps but he quickly adapted himself to the life of a fireman and now wants no part of starting. Nor, rated off his success in '66, is he likely to be asked to change his way of living.

BILL SINGER . . . Called up to the Dodgers in September, Bill Singer made three relief appearances down the pennant stretch, did not allow an earned run and further qualified himself for a full-season trial. After the season was concluded, Singer underwent an unusual bit of surgery. A piece of rib was removed to relieve a nerve-pinching condition. At times when he pitched Singer's finger became cold and, of course, lessened his efficiency in gripping the ball. The 22-year-old Pomona right-hander has been a member of the Dodger system since 1962 and has spent most of the last three years in the Pacific Coast League, winning 11 games in 1964, 14 in 1965 and 13 last season when he had his best P.C.L. earned run average (3.48). Bill also led the Pacific Coast loop in strikeouts with 217, his minor league career high. He hurled complete games in half of his thirty-two starts. Bill played baseball and basketball for Pomona High, pitched his local American Legion team to second place in the state tournament in 1959 and to the California championship in 1961 and then signed for a high-figure bonus to become a Dodger. On his last day as a teenager, just before his 20th birthday, Singer fired a no-hit, no-run game against Dallas. Two years later, almost to the day, Bill fanned 18 batters, one short of the Coast League record, as he blanked the Vancouver Mounties.

DON SUTTON . . . High among the candidates for Rookie-of-the-Year award until sidelined late in the season by an aching forearm, Don Sutton made a highly creditable 12-victory contribution to the Dodgers' 1966 pennant pursuit. It was, in many respects, a stormy season for the youngster. He was hit twice by line drives, once had to leave the game with a bloody thumb and twice was shelved under Dr. Bob Kerlan's orders because of a sore forearm muscle just below the elbow. He first injured the arm Sept. 5 in a game against the Giants and he was told to sit it out until Sept. 12. His last three appearances were four-inning jobs and it was obvious the Dodgers were taking no chance on further damage. Said Skipper Walt Alston: "I would rather lose the pennant than endanger a young man's career." Boasting one of the finest curves in the majors — and the ability to get it over the plate — Sutton actually had started twenty games which eventually were concluded in Dodger victory. Even after he was having his arm miseries, the Dodgers did well when he started, winning seven of his last nine games. The two they lost were both against the Cardinals — 3 to 2 in 13 innings and 2-0 (yeah, Larry Jaster!)

BATTERS

BOB BAILEY . . . The most publicized deal of the 1966-'67 trading season was the one which sent Maury Wills to the Pittsburgh Pirates and brought Bob Bailey and Gene Michael to the Dodgers. A Long Beach boy, Bailey had been paid a bonus estimated at $175,000 by the Pirates when signed into professional baseball. The Dodgers were interested in signing him then but dropped out of the competition. Bailey played only two seasons in the minors and has been with the Pirates ever since late 1962. Last year he was within two points of his top batting average and hit thirteen homers, his major league high. A star shortstop at Long Beach Wilson High when he brought baseball scouts a-running, Bailey divided most of his time between third base and the outfield with the Pirates. When traded to the Dodgers, Bailey said he didn't care where the Dodgers used him — third base, the outfield, first base or "I'll even help the concessionaire." It was fairly obvious Bailey was "happy to be back home." He had played two seasons with the Dodger rookies before signing with the Pirates. Bailey and his dad have a land-developing project in the swank Rancho Santa Fe area and also a heavy equipment and car rental business in Orange. Nevertheless, he was the first Dodger in uniform when the club instituted its program of three workouts per week last Winter. Seems like the guy wants to be around here a long time.

JIM CAMPANIS . . . One of the more unusual transactions made last season in the Dodger Farm System was a lend-lease arrangement in which catcher Jim Campanis, son of the Dodgers' Director of Scouting, was sent to the Seattle Angels when they lost Merritt Ranew by injury during a brawl on the field. Campanis brought an 0-for-9 record with him from Spokane but wound up the Pacific Coast League season with a .284 average, hit seven homers and was a vital part in the winning of the P.C.L. flag by Bob Lemon's team. This was Jimmy's highest classification play. He had hit .302 and .301 for Salem in 1963 and 1964 but dipped to .255 in the Texas League at Albuquerque. The 1966 season, therefore, was a vital year in his development and Jimmy was most impressive. There are few Dodger system players who work harder at the game than this youngster and, long after others have quit for the day at Spring training, he'll still be toiling in the batting cages. In high school (Fullerton), Jimmy hit .420. He added .400 and .444 averages in American Legion and Dodger Rookie play. He was All-League in baseball and the Most Valuable Player on the Fullerton High football team.

WILLIE CRAWFORD . . . Signed for a bonus of $100,000 and regarded as one of the top prospects in the Dodger system, Willie Crawford may be the answer to the Dodgers' pursuit of power when he moves up the ladder to Los Angeles. He, of course, has spent considerable time with the Dodgers already but not as the full-fledged regular they hope he will be. In his first pro year, Willie went to Santa Barbara after he was graduated from Fremont High and hit a fine .326 there. Just for a "look," the Dodgers brought him to Los Angeles late in the season and he hit .313 in ten games. Then, of course, the first-year rule harnessed him to a major league bench in 1965. Sent down to Albuquerque last year, he joined the Dodgers as a pinch runner late in the season so he has spent time with the Dodgers three straight years. Crawford's batting average was not as robust last year as it might have been but hte extra-base figures were encouraging — 20 doubles, a league-leading 14 triples and 15 home runs. In one Texas League game in July he slammed a pair of homers, a triple and a double — and drove in EIGHT runs. At Fremont High, Willie won All-City honors in football and baseball, ran the 100 in 9.7, 220-yards in 21.4 and broad-jumped 25 feet 1½ in.

MIKE CRISCIONE . . . Twenty-one-year-old Mike Criscione still rates his first professional home run as the biggest thrill of his brief career. He hit it against the centerfield wall in Salem and won $75 in clothes. He had signed his contract with the Dodgers only a few weeks before and did not expect to play until the Arizona Instructional League season in the Winter. Instead he was summoned to report to Pocatello in the Pioneer League and, after a week there, rushed to Salem. After a brief stint with Tri-Cities in 1966, he was sent to Ogden where his .282 average earned him "protection" with the big club during the draft period. Criscione, a native of upper New York state, attends Syracuse University during the off-season and played varsity ball there before being signed by Rudy Rufer, Dodger scout. He played Little League, Babe Ruth League and American Legion ball as well as baseball, football and basketball at Dunkirk High, where he was their top hitter in his freshman season.

WILLIE DAVIS . . . He isn't the only Dodger who would like to forget the 1966 World Series but Willie Davis has a more impelling reason than most. Willie suffered the ignominy of making three errors in the same inning of the second game and there are many who hold that at least two of the errors could have been called something else. Willie lost two balls in the sun and contributed a frantic overthrow after dropping one of them. If Willie had shied away from both balls as they fell, errors probably wouldn't have been called. Instead, he made an attempt to catch them. After the game he explained it this way: "You've always got a chance if you stab at a ball, even if you can't see it. So I did." Unfortunately for Willie this nightmarish inning caused some folks to forget that he had one of his finest major league seasons. He led the Dodger regulars in hitting (.284), had a fine collection of extra-base hits (31 doubles, 6 triples and 11 homers), drove in 61 runs and stole twenty-one bases. When the Dodgers began their Winter workouts at Dodger Stadium in preparation for 1967, the first guy in the batting cage was Willie Davis. This wasn't unusual. You rarely see Willie without a bat in his hands around a ball park. What WAS unusual was the fact he was practicing bunting. Most hitting experts figure Willie could add 20-30 points to his season average if he'd shake up the infield now and then with a drag bunt. It is something he hopes to perfect this year. By early May last season he found a batting stance to his liking and stayed with it the rest of the year. That's just about a personal record for Willie-D.

TOMMY DEAN . . . Rated one of the finest fielders among shortstops in organized baseball, Tommy Dean had a fine chance to impress his prospective major league manager, Walt Alston, last Winter, but a sore shoulder sent him to the sidelines. Alston had planned to see a great deal of Dean, even before Maury Wills left the Dodger squad in Tokyo, but the ailing arm ruined his plans. It was at bat that the Dodgers were anxious to watch Dean. As a fielder he has left little to be desired. Roy Hartsfield, who managed him at Albuquerque in 1965, said the kid was a "better fielder than half the major league shortstops" right then. Buzzie Bavasi, seeing him in the Arizona Instructional League, rated him better than Dodger great, Pee Wee Reese, at the same phase of their development. With scholarship offers from nineteen major universities as a baseball and basketball player, Tommy signed as a Dodger for a bonus in the $60,000 area. He had hit .510 in his four years of baseball for his hometown (Iuka, Miss.) High School and there were so many scouts on his trail the Dean family put numbers in a hat to set up a drawing by the scouts for their speaking "turn." The drawing was to have been on a Saturday. The Dodgers got there on Friday and signed Tommy and left a dozen other major league scouts wondering what had happened.

JIM FAIREY . . . The Dodgers have tabbed stocky Jim Fairey as one of their power hitters of the future and two fine minor league seasons in which he has topped .300 would seem to indicate they have him in the proper category. Fairey, who was an All-American at Erskine College with a slugging percentage of .828 and a batting average of .406 in his final collegiate season, hit .323, socking twenty home runs for Santa Barbara in his first pro season and last year, moved up to Albuquerque, hit .301 and thirteen round-trip blasts. Study his extra-base record — 24 doubles, 5 triples and 20 homers in 1965 and 18-13-13 in the same department last season. Over the two seasons he has played in organized baseball, this young left-handed larruper has compiled a slugging percentage of .506. He's merely carrying on his pre-pro days because in 1964 he led the nation's colleges in triples and homers and over a four-year stretch of American Legion baseball he hit a resounding .420. Leon Hamilton collared him for the Dodgers.

RON FAIRLY . . . A couple of guys named Ron — Ron Fairly and Ron Hunt — are teammates this year but they were anything but comrades last season. On a close play at second base in Shea Stadium Hunt came down heavily on Fairly and severely bruised his ribs. That was May 27. Ron didn't get back into a ball game until June 26 and had a rough time regaining his batting stroke. Fortunately, it came to him late in the season when the Dodgers needed it most. Twelve hits in eighteen times at bat, including four doubles and three homers, were cudgeled by Ron in an early-August, 5-game stretch. He had a big 4-for-4 day, including a homer in a vital mid-September game with the Pirates. And, in the last six games he played, with the pennant on the line, Ron scorched enemy pitching for nine hits in seventeen times at bat, rapped two doubles, three homers and drove in eight runs. All of this brought, after many ups and downs, a season batting average of .288, his best since 1961. In the month of September Ron drove in twenty-two runs as the Dodgers stormed from third place to a pennant. On Sept. 11 when the Dodgers went into first place on the strength of their fourth straight shutout victory, Fairly carried over the run which beat Houston, 1 to 0 — and the Dodgers never gave up first place thereafter.

AL FERRARA . . . They're still talking about a tape-measure home run Al Ferrara hit in the final game played by the Dodgers in Japan and now Al hopes to get the opportunity to stir up some conversation in his behalf in America. The sturdy right-handed socker got off the Los Angeles-Spokane shuttle run last year and had his first full campaign in the majors. But he went to bat only 100-odd times and, although he hit a creditable .270, he yearns for more action. Ferrara delivered a pinch single to drive in the winning run against Mike Cuellar, of the Astros, to give the Dodgers a 10-inning, 1-to-0 victory Sept. 10. Don Drysdale had started the game against Cuellar and left after 8⅓ innings so it was Phil (The Vulture) Regan who profited by Ferrara's decisive blast. The Dodgers also were helped a great deal, too, because the following day, a doubleheader victory (both by shutouts) swept the Dodgers into first place to stay. Ferrara also hit two homers in a June game against the Cubs, the Dodgers eventually winning on a tenth-inning circuit smash by Jim Lefebvre. During the Winter Ferrara inaugurated his movie career with a great speaking part. His one-liner in a jungle picture was "Ugh." Al made it without even a rehearsal.

JIM HICKMAN . . . Only Met to play all the way from the expansion draft days through the 1965 season, Jim Hickman came to the Dodgers in the four-player deal which brought Hickman and Ron Hunt to Los Angeles and dispatched Tommy Davis and Derrell Griffith to Shea Stadium. Hampered by injury through much of the 1966 season, Hickman is rated one of the most versatile players in the National League. He gives the Dodgers "insurance" at first, third and in the outfield. In addition he adds to their right-handed pinch-hitting corps. In 1965 against the St. Louis Cards' Ray Sadecki, Hickman hit three homers in the same game — also a single for a club mark of 13 bases in a game. Another Met record he set was hitting for the cycle — single, double, triple and homer — in 1963. Thirty years of age in May, Jim averaged better than 140 games per year with the Mets until sidelined for a lengthy spell last year. He won twelve letters at Ripley (Tenn.) High School in baseball, football and basketball and attended Mississippi and Memphis State one year each, playing freshman basketball at Ole Miss. Hickman hit fifteen home runs in 1965 and had his sights set on twenty-five when he suffered a dislocated wrist.

RON HUNT . . . It was a bit shocking to the Dodgers when Ron Hunt announced he was saddened by his trade from the New York Mets to the Los Angeles club last Winter. This made him something of a Dodger even before he got here. But a little California weather and a few World Series checks will probably convince him things aren't too bad here after all. Runner-up for National League Rookie of the Year in 1963 and voted the Most Valuable Met in 1963 and 1964, Hunt volunteered to go to the club's Florida Instructional League camp on a conditioning and weight-control program. He was the National League's All-Star second baseman in 1964 and the only Met ever voted a spot on the starting N.L. line-up. He was out much of 1965 with injuries, a finger injury preventing him from opening the season and a shoulder separation (after a collision with Phil Gagliano) keeping him out from May 11 to Aug. 5. He was the Mets leading batter in 1963 and 1964 and hit well above his career average when he had a .288 average last year. In Overland, Mo., Ron was a baseball-basketball-football star for Ritenour Senior High where he was an All-Suburban quarterback. Originally the property of the Milwaukee Braves and a third baseman, Hunt was moved to second when Red Schoendienst, now manager of the Cards, was sidelined by a lung ailment. Solly Hemus, on a scouting expedition for the Mets, saw Hunt play at Austin, Texas, and recommended his acquisition.

TOMMY HUTTON . . . The 1966 season was a notable one for Tommy Hutton. He was voted the Texas League Player of the Year when he won the circuit's batting championship with a .340 average. He was moved from Albuquerque to Spokane and then hustled along to the Dodgers where he got a few swings toward the end of the season. Nor was that the end of things. He also accompanied the National League champions on their tour of Hawaii and Japan. Signed by Ben Wade and Tommy Lasorda, the slick-fielding youngster hit .294 at Santa Barbara in 1965 and had 24 doubles, 5 triples, 20 homers, 63 runs batted in and 23 steals. His fine season gave him a spot on the list of nominees for the Helms Foundation Win Clark Award. Hutton, Willie Crawford and Jim Fairey all were named on the Texas League All-Star team for 1966. Tommy, 21 in April, won All-City honors in both baseball and basketball at South Pasadena High and batted .460 for the Dodger Rookies. His selection as Player of the Year in the Texas League was made even more notable by the fact he left Albuquerque July 29. His runs batted in total of 81 was so far in front of all others that he remained RBI champion right down to the end of the season against players who had more than a month to catch him while he labored at Spokane. With 19 RBIs at Spokane, he had an even hundred for the season.

LOU JOHNSON . . . A great stretch run by Lou Johnson in 1965 endeared him forever to Dodger fans and once again in 1966 when the pennant fever prevailed, Sweet Lou was stirring things up again. The Dodgers took over first place — for keeps — on September 11 and it wasn't just a coincidence that Johnson, at the moment, was right in the middle of a ten-game hitting streak. Matter of fact, Johnson hit safely in fourteen of fifteen games from Sept. 7 through Sept. 23, drove in nineteen runs during the month of September and raised his season average to .272, well above the .259 he hit when he was the Cinderella Man of 1965. In one four-game stretch he drove in 1-4-1-3 runs with seven hits, including two doubles and three homers. Lou had hit eleven homers through mid-September but blasted six in the stretch. He gets that way when he smells World Series money. Lou's career record reads like a railroad almanac. He wandered from one club to another from 1953 through early 1965. Then, in an emergency created when Tommy Davis fractured an ankle, he got his chance with the Dodgers. And in two seasons it has been "All the Way with L.B.J."

JOHN KENNEDY . . . One thing John Kennedy knows is that life is rarely dull with the Dodgers. Nothing like the old days with the Washington Senators. Kennedy came to the Dodgers in the multi-player deal which also landed Claude Osteen on Skipper Walt Alston's staff. In his first year with the club, he played for a World Championship team and then was asked to report at a Winter Instructional League to improve his hitting. In 1966 he was with another pennant winner and then toured Hawaii and Japan where he hit .300 and got paid off in yen for blasting home runs, including three in one weekend in Osaka. Back in the States, Kennedy moved his family home to Los Angeles and, with the rest of the Dodgers, enjoyed baseball practice in 80-degree heat in January when his native Chicago was battling below-zero temperatures. Kennedy saw a great deal more action with the Dodgers in 1966 than he had in 1965 and, with Maury Wills traded to the Pirates, he was entered into battles for regular duty at both short and third in '67. Kennedy broke into pro ball in 1961 and made his major league debut a year later. He certainly got off to an auspicious start. He hit a home run his first time at bat, ruining a bid for a no-hitter by Dick Stigman. He and Osteen combined for a great win over the Reds in July. Osteen topped Milt Pappas with a 4-hit shutout. Kennedy started one of the season's greatest double plays to keep Claude afloat. With the bases loaded and one out in the seventh, Deron Johnson bounced a hopper behind third. Kennedy went up high for the ball, stepped on third as he came down and then fired to John Roseboro for an inning-ending twin-killing. In the next inning, with two out, Kennedy doubled and scored on — you guessed it — a single by Osteen. Only run of the game!

JIM LEFEBVRE . . . Rookie of the Year in 1965 — the sixth Dodger to be so honored since the Ford Frick Plaque was created — Jim Lefebvre began the 1966 season as though he planned to sweep every honor in sight. He had hit safely in his last ten Spring training games and he started the year with an eight-game streak, hitting .419 in his getaway gallop and blasting four home runs. It took a Flu attack to cool him off. He was still hitting around .300 when he suffered a broken toe in mid-May. He jammed an Achilles Heel in June and sprained his hand in July but he battled all of these adversities, plus one protracted slump, and finished the year hitting twenty-four points ahead of his rookie .250. He doubled his home run output from 12 to 24, leading the club both years and his seventy-four runs batted in also was tops. He won the "Most Popular Pro Award" poll conducted by "The Tidings." The Los Angeles baseball writers found no difficulty in voting him Sophomore of the Year. No one had done such a job on the sophomore jinx in years. When Jim was the visiting batboy for Dodger games Dick Schofield gave him a lot of helpful hints — and they wound up the year of 1966 playing side by side. Lefebvre, most experts feel, will improve both his batting average and his home run production. His slugging came in spurts last year — four homers that first week, four in eight days in May, and three in successive games in August. Three times during the year he hit two in a game. And, although speed is not one of his strong points, he hit the only inside-the-park homer of the year at Dodger Stadium.

GENE MICHAEL . . . Larry Shepard, his manager at Columbus last season, says of Gene Michael: "I don't know of two major league shortstops who can field with Michael. As a matter of fact, I'm not sure there is one any better." A star basketball guard at Kent State and pursued by the New York Knicks when he was a collegian, Michael is 6 feet, 2 inches and, like Maury Wills, the man he hopes to replace with the Dodgers, is a switch-hitter who has sufficient speed to be the Dodgers' lead-off batter. He has been in organized baseball since 1959 and played three years in Triple-A. He even gave pitching a whirl for one season at Kinston of the Carolina League. Named as the International League's All-Star shortstop last season, he had his best year at the plate (.289) in the Triple-A circuit. He has been kicking around the minors for eight years — but so did Maury Wills and who would say that Maury didn't make it big when he got up here? When Maury became a Dodger he was 27 and that's the same age at which Michael gets his big chance.

FRED MOULDER . . . Tall Gene Michael will not be the only stringbean shortstop in the Dodgers' 1967 Spring Training assemblage. Twenty-two year old Fred Moulder, selected as the No. 1 shortstop of the New York-Pennsylvania League, measures 6 feet, 3 inches and weighs 182. A member of the Oklahoma American Legion All-Star teams of 1961, 1962 and 1963 and picked on the All-Big Eight Conference team in '65 and as an All-State basketball player in 1963, Moulder also starred in track during his scholastic and college days. He was signed by Bert Wells nd John Keenan and in his first year of professional baseball at Jamestown, N.Y., batted .294 with a better-than-fair sprinkling of extra-base hits — 13 doubles, 3 triples and nine home runs.

WES PARKER . . . One of the finest fielding first basemen in the majors, Wes Parker hopes for greater consistency at the plate in 1967. There were times last season when it appeared he had it made at the plate. He got off to a fine start, including a nine-game hitting streak in the first fortnight of the season. This put him at .350. The Dodgers were enroute to a 1-to-0 shutout on May 25 when, with two away, Wes's single drove in two runs and beat the Phillies, 2 to 1. That got Parker started again and he hit safely in ten of twelve games, hitting four homers during the splurge. In one game against the Mets he hit twice for the circuit, driving in four runs. He had a ten-game hitting streak in late June but was riding the bench before July ended. An eight-game hitting streak in late August and a seven-game binge down the pennant stretch were encouraging. But Parker's batting graph had its valleys, too, and he concluded the season at .253. This was fifteen points higher than Parker's 1965 average but anyone who knows this determined young man knows he wasn't satisfied with the end result.

JOHN ROSEBORO . . . He would be the last one to advocate the system for all players but John Roseboro came up with a new dodge in 1966 — he gave up batting practice. "I used to hit, hit, hit in the batting cage. I'd get my timing just right. Then I'd get into a game and nothing was right. After the practice 'lollypops', game pitches looked like 'aspirin tablets.' " Roseboro hit .233 in 1965 and raised the tempo to .276 last year. Roseboro strongly advocates that the regular pitchers should throw batting practice. "They're just wasting time throwing on the sidelines and also wasting a lot of good batting practice pitching. It would do some good hitting against them," concluded the outspoken Dodger veteran. Roseboro becomes a 10-year man with the Dodgers this season. He came up in 1957 and was immediately put to work in an emergency at first base. He also has filled in as an outfielder but most of his efforts have been expended on his activities as one of the busiest catchers in the game. Last year, for instance, he appeared in 142 of the Dodgers 162 games, 138 as a catcher, and led the league in total chances (976). He had never caught that many games in a single season over a career which stretched all the way back to 1952 at Sheboygan.

DICK SCHOFIELD . . . The Dodgers took over first place in the National League September 11 and remained there the rest of the season. That also was the first game in which Dick Schofield played for them. He didn't win that game but he was cast in a vital role thereafter. The next game in which he played he had four hits as the Dodgers beat the Mets, 8 to 3, for the sixth victory in an 8-game streak. He had hits against the Pirates in the seventh and eighth games of that splurge which gave the Dodgers a 3½-game lead, their biggest margin of the season. Unfortunately, Dick had arrived on the Dodger scene too late to be eligible for the World Series. They missed his spark. Schofield had the unusual distinction of playing for the Giants, Yankees and Dodgers all in the same season. Signed by the Cardinals for a reported bonus of $40,000, Schofield stepped right into the major leagues in 1953 after leaving Springfield, Ill., High School. He has never spent a full season in the minors, playing all or parts of six seasons with the Cards and from mid-season 1958 through mid-season 1965 with the Pirates. Answering a late-season emergency call for a pennant-bound club was nothing new for Schofield. In 1960 he took over for an injured Dick Groat and materially aided the Pirates in their great triumph.

DICK STUART . . . Set adrift by the New York Mets, more or less at his own request, Dick Stuart signed on with the Dodgers in July, wound up on a pennant winner and then got a look at baseball in Japan where some day he again may show off his hitting technique. Released by the Dodgers after returning from the Orient, Stuart was offered a 1967 contract when room on the roster became available. Stuart is one of the most devastating sluggers of current baseball. He hit sixty-six balls out of the park one year for Lincoln, Nebraska. His major league high was forty-two for the Boston Red Sox of 1963 in which year he led the American League in runs batted in (112), putouts for a first baseman (1207), assists (134) and, unfortunately, errors. It was the seventh straight year in which he paced a major league in misplays at first base, earning him titles which range from Mr. Strangeglove to Dr. Stonefingers. A member of the 1960 Pittsburgh pennant winner, Dick had also played for the Bosox, Phillies and Mets before the Dodgers acquired him. He has hit home runs in twenty-four major league parks and in three seasons — 1958, 1961 and 1964 hit them in every park of the league in which he was swinging. The only current parks in which he has not homered are Atlanta and Anaheim. In addition to the present fields he also has conquered the barriers at Colt Stadium in Houston, the Polo Grounds in New York, Busch Stadium in St. Louis, Seals Stadium in San Francisco and the Coliseum in Los Angeles. Wonder if any other major leaguer can match that record?

JEFF TORBORG . . . Working as an understudy for John Roseboro, sometimes known as Mr. Durable, isn't going to get a man a great deal of work but Jeff Torborg considers "Gabby" as the man who has helped him in his career more than any other person. "Anyone who won't listen and learn from John just doesn't want to become a baseball player," says the former Rutgers University star. In return for the coaching he receives from Roseboro, Jeff takes on as many of John's chores as he can. Before the game Torborg warms up the starting pitcher. During the games, of course, he finds himself action in the bullpen. Now and then Roseboro enjoys a day or night off and Jeff gets into the ball game. Last year this opportunity came to him only in forty-five games and almost half of these were shared with the Dodgers' hard-working No. 1 catcher. With the retirement of Sandy Koufax, Jeff has the distinction of having caught the great southpaw's last no-hit, no-run game. Roseboro had caught them three years in a row but Torborg was behind the plate when Sandy fired his Sept. 9, 1965, perfect game at the Chicago Cubs. "It would be tough to match a thrill like that," Torborg recalls, "but, really, I didn't do much more than catch the balls Sandy threw." In the last two innings that was certainly true as Sandy fanned six batters in a row to wrap it up. Jeff still treasures a ball Sandy autographed for him that night. It's the No. 1 trophy in his Mountainside, N.J., showcase.

JOHN WERHAS . . . Selected as utility man on the Pacific Coast League's 1966 All-Star team, John Werhas returns for another shot at the majors. His versatility (2b, 3b, OF) fits into the Dodger picture. A graduate of San Pedro High and the University of Southern California, Werhas has been Dodger property since 1960. He played for the 1958 Trojan club which won the NCAA championship, batting .312 that year. The following season John hit .415 and was declared the NCAA All-American third baseman. He also received honorable mention on the basketball All-American teams of 1959 and 1960. In his last four seasons at Spokane, Werhas has averaged in the .300 area — .295, .309, .287 and .306. His five-year home run output in Triple-A is likewise impressive — a total of seventy-seven. Perhaps this year will be the one in which he hits major league pitching in a manner approaching his Spokane record. He'll have a lot of Los Angeles folks rooting for him.

Salute to Sandy . . .

WHERE do you start and where do you end with Sandy Koufax's Dodger record?

Never in the history of baseball has a player concluded his career at such a peak of accomplishment as did Sandy when he retired after the 1966 campaign.

Moving toward greatness in 1959 when he tied the all-time record for strikeouts in a single game (18) against the Giants one August evening, Sandy smashed record after record. And there was nothing picayune about any of them. He picked on the best — proud marks established by the Johnsons, Mathewsons, Waddells, Hubbells, Deans, Fellers and Spahns.

Which are Sandy's greatest achievements? Take your pick.

He pitched no-hit, no-run games four consecutive years and his fourth was a perfect game. No pitcher had ever hurled more than three over a lifetime.

He fanned eighteen batters in two different nine-inning games. Only one other pitcher, Bob Feller, had done it — once.

He was the E.R.A. leader of the National League five straight years (1962 through 1966). This tied the N.L. record for number of times heading that department and set a new major league mark for consecutive years.

Set the major league record for the most shutouts (11) pitched by a left-hander.

Established the all-time strikeout record for a season—382.

Fanned ten or more batters in 97 ball games, including 21 games in 1965.

Was the only pitcher in the majors ever to fan 300-or-more batters three different seasons.

Set a N.L. record for a southpaw with 27 victories.

Set World Series mark for 15 strikeouts in a game and 23 in a 4-game series.

Tied Series mark by fanning first five batters to face him in 1963.

In 2,325 innings, exclusive of World Series, fanned 2,396 batters.

Named Most Valuable Player in 1963 and Pitcher of the Year in 1963, 1964, 1965 and 1966.

And he was thrice named by unanimous vote the winner of the Cy Young Award — an honor bestowed to no other pitcher more than once!

1966 PITCHING STATISTICS

Headed by the incomparable Sandy Koufax, three-time Cy Young award winner, the Dodgers once again marched off with the majority of N.L. pitching laurels — both individually and collectively. Koufax accomplished the following feats last season: Led in ERA with 1.73 for the fifth consecutive season to tie N.L. mark held by Grover Cleveland Alexander and his five straight titles set a new major league record; topped the majors with 27 wins, 317 strikeouts, 27 complete games, 323 innings pitched; tied Jim Bunning of the Phillies for most starts in N.L. at 41 and tied for the league lead with five shutouts. Relief ace Phil Regan led the league in won-lost percentage, .933 by virtue of a 14-1 record and he also compiled the longest winning streak in the N.L. (still current) of 13 games since his lone loss on May 17. As a team the Dodgers topped the N.L. in complete games (52); shutouts (20); strikeouts (1084) and ERA (2.62) for the lowest mark in that department since the St. Louis Cardinals' 1943 staff turned in a mark of 2.57. Dodger pitchers allowed the fewest hits (1287), runs (490), earned runs (425), home runs (84) and bases on balls (356).
